Saturday by a piece of timber falling upon it. He was at the Prince Alfred Hospital.
 A child named Samuel Pickett, aged 5, residing at No.
 Mitchell-street, Globe, was admitted to the Prince Alfred Hospital on Saturday, suffering from a lacerated wound over his right eye, caused by a fall on a stone.
 A little girl named Florrie Poulter, aged 7, residing at -street, Camperdown, received a fracture of her left thumb through a fall while climbing over a fence on Saturday. She was admitted to the Prince Alfred Hospital.

bodies to be formed. Then when these provincial governments are created they are to enjoy the right to tax still further. That is the view of Mr. MILLER. The people of the colony had better leave local government alone if trouble is to be the consequence. "Other taxation is not particularly mentioned as being additional expenditure. On this requiring of the necessities of the country, Mr. MILLER ventures to say, "Any attempt to tell me that the expenditure of this country must be a little more proof of the necessity for increased expenditure before the necessary requisite taxation."

Mr. MILLER draws a parallel between the expenditure of the colony and that of the United Kingdom. He says that the revenue of the colony may be divided into two parts, namely, £4,500,000 for the services, and £4,500,000 for the purposes of the central Government. Then we are told that out of £9,000,000 of revenue obtained by the colony only £30,000,000 is devoted to the purposes of the central Government. Where we have an expenditure of over £4 6s. per head, in England they have 16s. 3d. per head, and yet it is said we have not enough. Surely it was due to the country for Mr. MILLER to have said how much more we require. No doubt we have a larger territory than Great Britain and Ireland. But it is larger than it was 20 years ago, when so much less per head sufficed for all requirements? If the expenditure per head is to be increased as the population increases, where is it to stop? In most well-governed countries, as the population grows the cost per head of government diminishes. Mr. HENRY PARKES spoke in accordance with the accepted theory. If it was nonsense for him to say that the expenditure should be reduced his critic did not show it. Certainly Mr. MILLER did not make out any claim for increased expenditure.

Probably it will be said that our public expenditure includes work that in other countries is met from provincial funds. We certainly have no large system of self-government, although our cities and towns are incorporated as elsewhere. But, as we pointed out some time back, the general expenditure on public and local objects from our Consolidated Revenue, amounting in 1887 to £5 10s. per head of population, exceeds by more than £4 per head the Federal and State expenditure of the United States and Canada, the countries whose circumstances are most closely analogous to our own. Canada has faced large military expenditure, yet the cost of her general and provincial government combined did not exceed 25s. per head, while that of the United States, including the interest on the war debt and all the war expenditure, did not exceed a like amount. For all similar purposes last year New South Wales had £5,088,000, or £5 10s. per head of population, not £4 10s. per head, as Mr. MILLER states. The public will probably agree with the PREMIER rather than with his critic. If Sir HENRY PARKES is prepared to follow up his view, that the expenditure can be greatly reduced, then he will not need to ask for increased taxation even to pay off the deficit. Mr. MILLER may be correct in saying that a larger proportion of the taxation should be borne by property. That is a question, however, for tariff re-adjustment, not for increase of taxation, especially as property will undoubtedly be the basis of taxation under any local government bill that may be introduced.

The Government recently made an attempt to introduce some English trout into the Wollondilly River, at Goulburn. The attempt was only partially successful, as out of the 169 fish which it was endeavored to introduce a large number perished. A considerable number were, however, successfully liberated, and, but for a difficulty to be mentioned hereafter, might fairly be expected to survive and increase in the waters of the Wollondilly. This step would seem to indicate an awakening on the part of the Government to the desirableness of devoting a greater amount of attention to the acclimatization of fish than has been the case in the past. Some years since some river trout (Salmo fario)—the same species which has been introduced into the Wollondilly—were liberated in several of the rivers of the colony, and were reported to be doing well; but the fact that the trout set free in the Wollondilly were conveyed from Victoria, where this fish is now plentiful, suggests that our own endeavours in this direction have not been attended by much success. In Tasmania the English salmon was introduced more than 20 years ago, and specimens have been caught up to 20 pounds in weight, while in Victoria the English trout and perch are now successfully acclimatized. In New Zealand, also, the North American salmon has been successfully cultivated, and will no doubt be a feature of New Zealand rivers in the future. A good deal of prize-worthy private enterprise has been manifested in the attempts to acclimatize the fish of other countries in our rivers; but so serious a work should not be left to the scientific enthusiasm of private persons. As the enrichment of our fish resources would mean an addition to the food supplying capacities of the country, and, consequently, an increase in the wealth of the community, it is manifestly the duty of the Government to deal with the matter. As the task is of such a difficult and delicate nature, one or two initial failures should not be enough to produce permanent discouragement. The Government should obtain such information as is available concerning the fish of the greatest commercial value which are likely to thrive in the climate, and then devote themselves to the work of acclimatization, with that energy which alone science overcomes obstacles and achieves its results.

With regard to the species of fish best calculated to flourish here, the report of the Royal Commission of 1880 upon fisheries—a work of importance which cannot be too highly estimated, and which bears throughout the mark of the late Mr. DALLER's hand—contains much valuable information. According to this report the North American salmon is the fish which offers the greatest inducement for the work of acclimatization. This fish has been acclimatized in New Zealand, and in a tinned condition is largely consumed in these colonies. It is stated by experts to be in no sense inferior to the English salmon, and its wonderful powers of increase have made its capture and preparation for the markets of the world one of the very first of North American industries. The successful acclimatization of this noble fish would be a distinct boon to the country, and the attempt certainly well merits the attention of the Government. It has been asserted, as an objection to such an attempt, that if the ova were successfully hatched and the young fish went to sea, they would perhaps make use of their liberty to find their way to some other shore, and would return here no more. This is a risk which has to be undergone in making the experiment, but the success of Tasmania in salmon acclimatization causes one to think that the danger is not a very great one. The English salmon does not seem likely to be so successfully acclimatized here as that of America, although the colder seas and deeper and more rapid rivers of Tasmania appear to have been well fitted for the former variety. The introduction of either species would, however, be acceptable to us; and the Government in making the attempt should be guided by the opinion of the experts who have pronounced in favour of the American salmon. Another fish which is exceedingly likely to succeed in the waters of this colony, and which has frequently been mentioned as deserving of the attention of the colonists in this direction, is a fish known as the gourami, which attains a large size, and is "reported to be one of the best flavoured fishes in the East Indian Archipelago. It has been transported to Penang, the Mauritius, and even South America, and successfully acclimatized." It is possessed of great vitality, and "will eat anything," and thus offers less difficulty in the way of acclimatization than most fishes.

The various authorities who have dealt with the possibilities of fish acclimatization in these colonies have enumerated many species of fishes, an endeavour to introduce which presents high probabilities of success. Of all these, however, it appears to us that the salmon and the gourami are those to which attention might most advantageously be given by the Government. There are, doubtless, numbers of other fishes which might be successfully acclimatized here, but which offer little inducement for the labour expending their value from an ornamental point of view. The pastime of angling in our rivers has very few votaries mainly on account of the scarcity of fish. It would, perhaps, be easy enough to acclimatize many of the less-er fish inhabitants of English rivers in our streams, but excepting where successful acclimatization is likely to be of profit to private enterprise, the work must be left to private enterprise. Something has already been done in the colonies in the acclimatization of fishes more ornamental than valuable. In Sydney and about it the Crucian carp and goldfish are now completely acclimatized. The same fishes, as well as the European gudgeon and perch, have, like the salmon, been acclimatized in Tasmania, and Victoria has also successfully essayed the acclimatization of several English species. So far we have practically had no reverses to discourage us in the idea that the work of acclimatization once undertaken here in a scientific spirit will be attended with complete success. It is improbable that any attempt at fish acclimatization in the rivers of the western slope would be successful. Setting aside the marked disadvantages of these streams as a habitat for European fishes, they are infested by the gigantic Murray River cod, whose voracity tempts it to devour all in its way. Against this rapacious foe it would be extremely difficult for any introduced fish to make headway, and it would for this reason have been well if the Government had released the trout in some other river than the Wollondilly. Some years since the Murray cod was introduced into the Wollondilly from Lake George, and since then has made rapid progress in that stream. It is not at all unlikely that the cod will at once destroy the newly introduced trout, and thus foil the attempted acclimatization—a consideration which indicates how necessary it is for the Government to pursue the work of acclimatization, with a due regard for the natural difficulties by which it is beset.

Several of our most disastrous conflagrations have occurred on very hot days, and the serious fire at the office of the Evening News on Saturday night adds another to the number. Although in this instance no particular connection can be traced between the heat of the weather and the outbreak of the fire, Nor did the great heat of the weather lead to the spread of the flames. The corporation law which now requires the exterior of all buildings to be constructed of comparatively fire-proof materials served to prevent the extension of the fire. With adjacent wooden or shingled roofs, heated by the dryness of the weather, it would have been almost impossible on Saturday to confine the fire within the limits of the building in which it commenced. The loss, however, is a most serious one. The destruction of property is very great, and the proprietors must for a time be put to much inconvenience in the issue of their journal. On such occasions, however, the public are always sympathetic and considerate, and we have no doubt that they will fully recognize the unfortunate position in which the owners of the newspaper have been placed. As to the fire itself, it is to be regretted that the service of the brigades was not more effective. Unfortunately, on many of these occasions there has been something wanting. It would appear that some of the engines reached the scene of the fire on Saturday night promptly, but, from the want of water apparently, they could not get to play on the building until the flames had firmly taken hold of it. By the time the engines began their work all hope of saving the premises was at an end. In the later days of the old water supply service we were accustomed to complaints of the want of water on such occasions, but it is very disappointing to find that with our new scheme there should be a like cause of complaint. It is to be hoped that, with the experience gained of the defects of our fire-extinction appliances, whatever they were, there will be a remedy applied, so that when next the firemen have to face their enemy they will be in a position to give a better account of their services.

The Railway authorities in Melbourne have for the second time made a sudden swoop on the suburban passengers, and detected a number of persons travelling with second-class tickets in first-class carriages. Under the Melbourne system of suburban traffic it is necessary that the examination of tickets should be a little perfunctory, and that a good deal should be left to the honesty of the railway customers. The sentiment of honour is one of the most potent social forces in the present day, but the area of its operations is evidently limited, and it is not considered to be a point of honour not to cheat the Government. Fines and the risk of exposure have proved impotent, and when the Railway officials devote suddenly from the accustomed routine, and demand the presentation of tickets, the net cast always makes a good haul. What is the dominant motive that induces people to commit this offence? It cannot be economy, because the right of travel having been purchased and paid for, all that is gained by slipping into the superior carriage is a little personal luxury for a few minutes. Is it the small increment of physical comfort—sitting on a cushioned seat instead of on wood—that constitutes the temptation, or is it the social distinction of being classed only for a few minutes with the more well-to-do portion of the population? Or is it the pleasure of making a bargain—of getting more for the money than the money's worth, in other words, the pleasure of cheating? There must be a motive sufficiently strong to induce so many persons to run the risk of detection and exposure. Both sexes are liable to the same weakness, for we read that there was a good percentage of women amongst the offenders. A fair notion of the general force of conscience is obtainable from tests of this kind, because there is no room for hypocrisy in the matter. Of course we cannot tell how many people abstain from cheating simply from fear of being found out, all we get is the percentage of people on whom that fear does not operate. It is at all times hard for us to say how much of what passes current for morality is due to the direct force of conscience and the preference for right doing, and how much is due to the social props to which we all owe so much, the force of public opinion, the desire to stand well with our neighbours, and the fear of disgrace. But even these social props fail at times, and people will run the risk of disgrace simply to catch at some small temporary advantage. There are many persons, too, who will be honest towards their neighbours and their tradesmen, and who will not hesitate to cheat the Government, which they look upon as a sort of abstract entity, having no personal claims to consideration, and which therefore may be cheated without immorality. It is important for our moralists to note facts like these, because from the fruit we judge of the tree, and from the way in which people act when they think they are safe from detection we get an insight into their motives.

We learn that a caucus meeting of the supporters of the Government has been held for next Wednesday forenoon, at the office of the Colonial Secretary. It is understood that the object of the meeting is to consider what course of action should be taken with respect to the business of the remaining portion of the session.

The Intercolonial Eight-oar race took place over the championship course on the Parramatta River on Saturday afternoon, and resulted in a decisive victory for Victoria, which colony has now gained nine out of the 12 contests that have taken place. Five of the Victorian victors were achieved on the water at that colony, and four on the Parramatta River. The years in which this colony was victorious were 1879, 1882, and 1883. Two of those victories were gained on the Parramatta River and the other on the Yarra.

Our London correspondent, in his letter which we publish this morning, supplies an account of the rivalry in the journalistic world over the publication of Sir Morell Mackenzie's book, "The Fatal Illness of Frederick the Noble." The Parramatta Commission, the chairman of Lord Randolph Churchill's aim was into the Cabinet, the position of Mr. Chamberlain, and other subjects, are noticed by our correspondent.

The medical men of Sydney had a harbour excursion and luncheon on Saturday to celebrate the centennial year of the colony. The gathering was at the invitation of Dr. Chambers (President of the New South Wales Branch of the Medical Association) and Dr. Knagge (Chairman of the Medical Section of the Royal Society of New South Wales). The luncheon, which was held in the pavilion at Corny's Gardens, was attended by about 180 guests. The chief toast was given by Dr. Chambers, and the vice-chair by Dr. Knagge, and a number of distinguished guests were also present. The toast list included "The Year we Celebrate," "The Medical Section," and "The Public Medical Services." In responding on behalf of the New South Wales Branch of the Medical Association Dr. Russell alluded to the necessity for legislation to protect the interests of the profession, and pointed out the necessity of unanimity with respect to the principles of the bill. The affair generally was a success.

The members of the Natural History Association held a collecting excursion on Saturday, when thirty-nine of them spent an afternoon at Green's Point, Watson's Bay, under the leadership of Mr. John Brazier, F.L.S. Numerous specimens, one of which was an Ootopus maculosus, were obtained, and the excursion was much enjoyed.

As the result of a movement among the friends of the well-known organist, Mr. Thomas Banks, the grave of that deceased gentleman, in the Waverley Cemetery, has been decorated with a handsome marble headstone, and yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large assembly, the ceremony of unveiling the memorial was performed with much solemnity. The members of St. Mary's Cathedral choir, with whom the deceased was extremely popular during the long term he occupied the position of organist, attended in a body, and under the direction of Mr. J. A. Delany sang with fine feeling and improvisation, the "Pie Jesu," and the "Requiem" motet from Cherubini's celebrated mass for the dead, and several verses of Allegri's Miserere. In removing the black drapery from the snowy marble, Mr. T. M. Slattery, M.L.A., in a few simple but sympathetic words, referred to the good qualities of the deceased as a man and a musician, alluding to the fact that he was a worthy pupil of Packer, Cordner, and Howley, and touching on the modesty, the unaffectedness, and the amiability which had characterized both the professional and private life of the deceased. In the design of the monument a representation of an organ and an open page of Mozart's Twelfth Mass, both cut in relief, are gracefully and suggestively introduced.

The sittings of the Central Criminal Court will be continued at the Darlinghurst Courthouse at 10 o'clock this morning.

The sittings of the Metropolitan Court of Quarter Sessions will be resumed at the Darlinghurst Courthouse this morning. The following cases are down for trial—Arthur J. Wallis, breaking and entering; Arthur Albert Goldard, stealing; a dwelling; Sarah Davidson and Archibald Davidson, stealing in a dwelling; John Leonard, manslaughter.

During the past week numerous petty robberies have been reported to the suburban police stations. Not only have houses been entered, but a considerable amount of attention has been devoted to poultry, pigeons, &c. Amongst the places reported as having been entered were those of Dr. Hanson and Mr. W. K. Chapman, of Concord. Mr. J. Smith, of Liverpool, was arrested, was seized of a large number of pigeons during the week; on the same night Mr. R. H. Howa, of Summer Hill, was robbed of pigeons to the value of £15. The police, judging by the small force stationed in the western suburbs, are powerless to put down these robbery epidemics.

In a cablegram published in Saturday's issue, respecting the appointment of Moderator of the Established Church of Scotland, the name is given of the Rev. Dr. Gloof, of Glasgow. We are informed that this should read "the Rev. Dr. Glasgow," the name having been probably mutilated in transmission.

The following is the order of musical service at St. Andrew's Cathedral this afternoon, 4.30:—Magnificat, Goss in A; nunc dimittis, Goss in A; anthem, "Blessed are the merciful" (Hills).

SPECIAL SERVICES were held at the Croydon Congregational Church yesterday morning and evening. There were large congregations on each occasion, the singing being led by a powerful choir. At the former service the Rev. Dr. Hannay preached, and in the evening the Rev. W. Day, of England, conducted service.

There evening a public meeting in connection with the Wesleyan Foreign Missions will be held in the Centenary Hall, York-street. Mr. W. McMillan, M.L.A., will take the chair.

The following is the report in connection with Prince Alfred Hospital for the week ending 24th November:—Number of in-patients at last report, 123 males, 78 females; since admitted, 30 males, 12 females; discharged, 24 males, 11 females; died, 4 males, 1 female; remaining in hospital on 24th November, 115 males, 78 females; number of out-patients treated during the week, 331; number of casualty cases treated but not admitted, 175; total, 506.

APPOINTMENT OF COLONIAL GOVERNORS.

THE STANDARD ON THE QUESTION.

SIR HENRY PARKES SPEECH ENDORSED.

(By Cable.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Nov. 24.

In the House of Commons last night, Baron de Worms, Under-Secretary for the Colonies, read a telegram which had been received from Mr. Playford, the Premier of South Australia, embodying the opinions of the Government of that colony upon the question of the appointment of colonial Governors. Mr. Playford's message, which was in the form of a reply to the recent communication of the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the question, intimated, among other things, that "Ministers do not desire that the local Government should have the power of control of the election of Governor, or that any gentleman should be asked to undertake office subject to local approval. They only seek an opportunity of stating for the consideration of the Imperial Government, in such manner as may be most convenient to the Colonial Office, any reasons which may occur to them why any contemplated appointment appears to them undesirable."

The Standard endorses the opinions contained in the précis of the speech delivered by Sir Henry Parkes in the New South Wales Assembly on the occasion of moving the resolutions with regard to the appointment of colonial Governors. It says that the speech was worthy of the importance of the subject, for while the words of Sir Henry convey an admonition to the Imperial Government, the language is respectful and in no way irritating.

The Standard also states that the conditions advanced by New South Wales and South Australia are so temperate that they must be complied with if the tie between the colonies and England is to be maintained. The article says that the Colonial Office ought to privately ascertain the opinion of a colony regarding the person whom the Home Government proposed to appoint as Governor.

CARDINAL MORAN IN MELBOURNE.

(By Telegraph.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

Cardinal Moran, attended by Dr. O'Haran, presided at high mass, at St. Patrick's Cathedral, this morning. Dr. Moran, Bishop of Ballarat, and Dean Beecham, of Launceston, assisted. In the sanctuary were seated Archbishop Carr, Archbishop Murphy, of Hobart; and Dr. Dunn, Bishop of Warrnambool, the latter prelates being the guests of the Archbishop of Melbourne, upon whose invitation a few of the principal clergymen of the city and suburbs met the Cardinal and visiting prelate at dinner at the palace on Eastern Hill. Cardinal Moran will leave Melbourne on Monday. It was generally believed that Cardinal Moran would be the bearer of a pallium to invest Archbishop Murphy, of Hobart, but no consensus has been held, at Home since Dr. Murphy's elevation, and the pallium could not be handed to him unless a delegate was appointed by the Holy See.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN GIPPSLAND.

THE TOWN OF WALLHALLA ALMOST DESTROYED.

(By Telegraph.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

Last night a most destructive fire occurred at Wallhalla, in Gippsland, and almost the whole of the business part of the town was destroyed. Nearly 80 buildings were burnt. At half-past 7 an alarm was given that Crawford's drapery was ablaze. Letters hurried out, but their efforts were futile, owing to the valves being out of repair. The fire spread rapidly north and south, and the whole block was consumed, including the Banks of Australasia and Victoria, the Mechanics' Hall and Library. The damage is estimated at £20,000. The Tunnel quartz battery and Post Office barely escaped.

FOUR LIVES LOST.

(By Telegraph.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

This afternoon Alfred Green and another man, accompanied by Alice White and Mrs. Scott, employed at the Royal Hotel, Seymour, went boating on the Goulburn River. The boat came in contact with some rocks and capsized, and the four occupants were drowned. The men were recent arrivals from Melbourne.

SUICIDE IN MELBOURNE.

(By Telegraph.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

On Saturday morning Leon Bourquin was found dead in bed, at his lodgings, Cecil-street. On the 1st of November he had been shot in the head. It was a case of suicide through financial difficulties. Deceased was an enthusiastic bowler, and was secretary of the Victorian Bowling Club. He carried on business as an importer of hairdresses' material in Post Office-place.

FATALITIES AT SEA.

(By Telegraph.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

Several fatalities were reported during the voyage of vessels which have just arrived. On the 1st of November a steamer named J. E. Graham fell from the mainmast, struck the rails, and went overboard and was lost. R. Jacobson fell from the spar of the Borghild into the sea and was drowned. One of the crew of the Hannah Laodels fell overboard. The lifeboat was lowered, but it was smashed against the ship's side. A second boat was got out and succeeded in rescuing the man, who was clinging to a lifebuoy which had been thrown to him.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

Minister, his part is equally unconcerned, and having plenty to occupy his mind, does not seem to be troubled with the constant presence of Randolph's death. It especially as he gets along very well without it. He has any distinct feeling on the subject at all, it is one of unwillingness to promote the political prospects of a man who would be a formidable rival to Mr. Jefferson's claims to the reversion of the leadership of the House of Commons. Another point which weighs with the Conservatives is their certainty of seeing Lord Harrington sitting on the Treasury Bench before they get great lapse of time. While there is a probability of success occurring, they cannot with great confidence venture the pretensions of the noble member for "Medina del Campo" and further Lord Randolph's prospects best would be the death of the Duke of Devonshire, and the consequent
